Our friends and family in spirit were real people, living real physical lives, each of them in their own way before they made their transition. They had likes and dislikes, hopes and dreams, happy times and sad times, which when all blended together made them the individual person that they were, (and still are.)

In our efforts to become a voice for the spirit world, we often get lost in what we think evidence and mediumship should be, rather than fully allowing the spirit world to share with us what it is they need to say.

In this one-day workshop I will help you to unfold the naturalness of your mediumship and that amazing quality of your soul which enables connection with the spirit world.

Together we will explore:

The blending process.

Exploring and deepening different types of evidence.

The art of allowing.

I look forward to spending the day with you as together we explore your mediumistic qualities, strengthening the relationship between you and the spirit world, with both theory and practical exercises in a safe, encouraging and supportive environment.
